INTRODUCTION

Lorsque l'on s'intéresse aux agrumes, la complexité de ce groupe végétal apparaît rapidement. Depuis plus de 300 ans, un nombre important de classifications botaniques, tendant à structurer chacune à sa façon le genre Citrus, est apparu. S'y ajoute une richesse importante de noms locaux, issus de la tradition orale, avec les variations que cela entraîne. Plus récemment, l'apparition de dénominations commerciales, afin de diffuser un fruit qui occupe la deuxième place dans les échanges mondiaux de produits végétaux, a encore augmenté le nombre des appellations. Rien n'est simple dans le jardin des Hespérides !

Cet annuaire, issu de la collaboration entre chercheurs partageant le même intérêt sur les agrumes, et ceci dans plusieurs pays de tradition agrumicole, est la première étape d'une volonté de standardisation et d'identification dans ce groupe de fruit. Il s'appuie sur la classification du japonais Tanaka qui, si elle ne fait pas l'unanimité dans le monde des taxonomistes, a l'avantage d'être très détaillée. En annexe, les équivalences avec celle de l'américain Swingle sont données, afin que chacun puissent faire son choix.

Les tableaux, triés alphabétiquement par variété, indiquent, pour chaque nom rencontré (nom local, appellation commerciale, variant orthographique,...), son binôme latin généralement admis dans la classification de Tanaka et son nom standardisé. Une synthèse des appellations des hybrides complète cet annuaire.

Ce document est un des produits de l'informatisation des collections d'agrumes présentes depuis des décennies dans les centres de recherches. C'est aussi une première étape vers la mise en commun des informations disponibles sur ces sites mais sous forme hétérogène, et donc difficilement synthétisable.

Cette première version, forcément incomplète, compte tenu de l'ampleur du sujet, ne demande qu'à être amendée, complétée par vos informations : n'hésitez donc pas à contacter un des contributeurs, dont l'adresse figure à la fin de cet annuaire, afin d'apporter votre concours à la prochaine édition.

Citrus belongs to a group of plants that botanists and horticulturists have tried to classify, over the past three centuries, into coherent species and genera. Various attempts were made to organize what is now appearing as a pool of complex genetic diversity. Being also a social and cultural crop, countless vernacular names, resulting from oral tradition, were bestowed to citrus varieties and cultivars.

Furthermore as one of the major fruit commodity in modern agricultural production more an increased number of citrus cultivars are presently identified under brand names. No wonder therefore that today's visitors of the Hesperids Garden confront difficulties of identification !

The present handbook is an outcome of the close collaboration recently established among various national citriculturists and pomologists. It is aimed at proposing a first step of standardization and classification of the citrus fruits, within the framework of the Japanese Tanaka system. Although far from being unanimously accepted, the latter has the advantage of proposing more detailed descriptions. An equivalence is given with the more synthetic American classification of Swingle for easing the access to this document.

The various tables are sorting out the varieties by alphabetical order with official and sometimes conventional spellings, and corresponding binomial Latin labellings proposed by Tanaka, when available. A synthetic presentation of numerous citrus hybrids is also proposed.

This document was achieved as a result of the efforts developed over the last decades in various research centers for establishing comprehensive data base systems of citrus collections. It should be considered as a first version of a document that needs to be constantly improved with the help of its readers. Please feel free to contact one of its contributors whose names are submitted at the end of the document for elaborating a new and more updated edition.
