Garden inspiration: Designed to enrich your outdoor space

Scent, colour, light and air

It is almost spring. Can you feel the urge to get out of the house and plant something?

Canada Blooms provides the perfect spark for your outdoor imagination. See an idea at the show, and you will likely find a contact within the pages of this magazine to bring it alive — on your own property. Improving the environment around your home invites you to think about some elements that are tough to hold in your hands, but certainly drive your emotions:

Scent has universal appeal. Plants and flowers, in particular, evoke powerful memories. Lilacs can take you right back to your grandmother's farm; carnations can transport to you to prom. Take the cue, and use scent to make your surroundings live on in the minds of your guests and your family.

Colour drives homeowners to fill garden centre parking lots over the May long weekend. Paint is nice, but living floral colour trumps it hands down. Feed your appetite for colour with foliage and flowers!

Light brings colour alive. Light sustains your plants and light plays a powerful role in brightening your attitude. Appreciate light better, through the moving leaves of your home garden and landscape.

Atr. We depend on air, yet we cannot see it. Air defines the space where plants exist, as they improve its quality by providing oxygen. We can feel the summer breeze, but we cannot touch it. Use your plantings, and the air between, to define your family's garden haven.

Living gardens give us the chance to stop and consider captivating intangibles like scent, colour, light and air. Surround your senses with the delight that horticulture brings.

Welcome

Outdoor inspiration is only pages away

Garden Inspiration, brought to you by the horticultural experts at Landscape Ontario Horticultural Trades Association, is designed as a tool to help you make more of your outdoor living space. Members of LOHTA operate in a wide range of horticultural specialties, and are united and serious about their commitment to spread the joys and benefits of horticulture.

No matter your level of gardening expertise, the new plant listings in this issue offer valuable and exclusive information. If you are an experienced gardener, you may be pleased and surprised that breeders have overcome a weakness of your favourite perennial. If you are newer to gardening, this magazine opens up a whole world of plants and possibilities. If something catches your eye, finding that specific new cultivar at your garden centre can be less important than planting a tried and true plant in the same family. This information was compiled by horticulturist Sarah Willis, who studied at the University of Guelph and the Niagara Parks

The focus is narrow when looking at plant cultivars. Step back, and your perspective changes to a garden bed, a patio or an entire property. The dream landscapes pictured in this issue are professional work from LOHTA members, and can inspire you on many levels.

All the landscapes pictured won Landscape Ontario Awards of Excellence for 2006, juried by teams of horticultural experts. The judges define a specific standard of excellence, and do not grant awards in specific categories if their standard is not met. Whether they inspire you to emulate a detail on your own property, embark on a large do-ityourself project or engage a member of the trade to design or construct your own landscape, the Awards' objective has been met.

Enjoy using this information to improve the environment around your home in 2007.

There are thousands of varieties of this popular, easy-togrow perennial in nearly every size and colour imaginable. Daylilies are standards in an old-fashioned garden, known for their multitude of short-lived blooms, but recent developments in breeding have created cultivars that bloom for a longer period or re-bloom later in the summer. They are tolerant of a wide variety of soil conditions, but do best in fertile, well-drained soil. Even when daylilies aren't blooming, their long grass-like leaves add a fine texture to the garden. Garden frames a lakeside panorama ith a lovely property on Lake Ontario, these homeowners chose to invest in their landscape to enjoy a cottage-like retreat without the drive. Every square foot of this garden was thoughtfully utilized to make the most of the site, which includes a small lawn area for the family's dog.

lants chosen to balance and soften the hardscape include minimal maintenance evergreens, perennials and bulbs that will come up year after year.

fence of tempered glass was designed to create a feeling of privacy while respecting the neighbour's lateral views of the lake. The infinity pool sits 50 feet above Lake Ontario and creates a seamless view of water from the India sandstone deck.

Proper care shows

aintaining this property appears easy from the street, but that view is quite deceiving. Floral beds overflowing with perennials, annuals and tropicals, Indiana limestone walkways and stepping stones, a property grade that drops more than 100 vertical feet from the back patio to the in-ground swimming pool, a garden balcony three stories up, and much more make maintenance at this home an arduous affair.

Dusty Miller Landscaping, Queensville, 905-478-1820 www.dustymillerlandscaping.com

he owner of this small, restricted back yard in a new subdivision wanted to de-emphasize both a fence and two-car garage, add as much greenery as possible, but still have enough space for a functional and attractive terrace.

Limitations become assets

n the garage, three square boxes with stainless steel backs were slightly recessed to create the look of picture frames or shelves. The muted green colours found inside the house were repeated outside to soften the fence and garage and harmonize them with the foliage.

he homeowners wanted a completely new, more spacious entrance, while preserving the existing front step. The driveway and entrance now tie together and the period character of the house has been retained. The combination of automatic irrigation, plants selected to suit the three different micro-climates, and composted manure mulch resulted in quick plant growth in the first season of planting.
