Presidents Message December 2015

To the members of the Cymbidium Club of S.A. thank you for participating in a fabulous year which is all too soon coming to an end.

Firstly it is my pleasure to thank the committee members who work so hard to make this years' program successful. It is always difficult to single out members for individual thanks. But there is always some members who undertake challenges with enthusiasm and commitment over and above what we would expect.

In no certain order I want to thank Graham Fear for the continued development of the Cym. Club monthly magazine. Graham' new ideas and enthusiasm are a reflection of his personal commitment.

Our monthly plant competitions and shows would not be possible without the long term commitment of our judging panel. Most of our judges have been on our panel well before the year 2000. One of our judging assistants, Michael Willoughby spends many hours producing show cards, show schedules and prize lists.

Barry Bailey another committee member spends many hours organising, monthly plant raffle and judging prizes. Barry's contacts with interstate speakers and growers is a great benefit to organising our yearly speakers program. Barry always has his hand up when a request is made for extra help.

Christine Robertson runs her own business and still finds time to manage the club's finances as our treasurer. In addition to her usual role, this year's Cym. Club Spectacular posed additional challenges to her club financial role, with first class results.

Graham Morris although not currently a committee member is always willing to undertake any task asked of him. His journey this year has involved travelling with his wife and yet whether he is in South Aust., Victoria or New South Wales, he is working for our club. Thank God for mobile phones. Graham's updating of our face book page and new members group oversight are always enlightening.

The ladies who help out in the kitchen preparing our monthly supper. Rosemary Bray and Pauline McLean are two of our silent helpers whose efforts bless us all.

Our new life members this year Brian and Shirley Brand continue to support our club at every opportunity, the Cym. Spectacular this year would not have been possible without the support and management of our Spectacular Committee, Ray Brady, Moss Bray, Wayne Baylis and Ben Knobben.

And my special thanks go to so many members who offered assistance and support this year But the year is not over. Our Christmas meeting incorporating a supper supplied by the club and a talk by Neutrog, will provide some surprises. Remember to bring your thinking cap and look forward to our special Christmas raffle.

I look forward to seeing you at our next meeting.

Des Bettcher
President

Wire Stands For Your Cascading Orchids,

As we all know it is getting very hard to purchase wire pot stands to hold or show your cascading orchids, I have found three new ones in the most unlikely place. ????????

There is a small one which is not that good but there is two 60cm high ones in gold and aqua but they have a gap to hold the pot of eight and a half inches so you will need a 9 inch or 23cm pot to hold your plant, now here is the good news, they are in K Mart and they are only $6 so at that price they are worth using and adjusting yourself to use them, they are not in the garden section but in the décor section so keep looking until you find them, photo below and they are called

SECRET TO ORCHID SUCCESS

PLANT OF THE WEEK

CLIVIA SPECIES

Kaffir Lily

Clivia are the number one plant choice for areas with dry shade and root competition. These hardy plants look great when mass planted under trees or used as a border, and also make attractive tub specimens. The broad, deep green strapy leaves look good all-year round, with the heads of large orange trumpet flowers in late winter and spring being a bonus. There are also red and cream cultivars available, however, they can be pricey. Clivia are relatively expensive to buy because they are slow to multiply, however, once established they divide readily.

ASK SOPHIE

Sophie Thomson seeks expert advice on how to achieve the best results with cymbidium orchids

Recently I received a question from a reader about cymbidium orchids and how to get the best results for next season's flowering.

I decided to ask cymbidium expert Graham Morris for his top tips, however, his answer was too long for me to include in our regular "Ask Sophie" question-and-answer section.

His information was so good, though, I thought I would turn it into the article itself. Graham is a member of the Cymbidium Club of South Australia and, up until a few years ago, used to own and run the largest cymbidium orchid nursery in the state and one of the largest in Australia.

The reader question was from Patty in Renmark, who wrote: "I have quite a few cymbidium orchids which I repotted last year, and this year only a few flowered. What will give me the best results for next season's flowering? How much sunlight do they need during summer? Should I be potting them in full sun now? They are under a pergola where they get filtered sun through a panel of clear roofing."

Graham answered as follows: Recently divided and repotted cymbidium plants sometimes take two years to begin flowering well.

Plants should not be divided into small divisions and should not be potted into large pots.

Generally, a plant three or more good-size bulbs, potted into a pot large enough to allow two or three more years' growth before repotting, is good.

REPOTTING

During repotting, many growers remove more than 50 per cent of the old roots. If grown well, new and strong roots will develop quickly.

Keep newly potted plants damp and provide a growing area where they receive about 50 per cent light for most of the day. Shading from a 50 per cent shadecloth-covered area (black is best) is ideal.

SOPHIE'S OPEN INVITATION

Don't miss the chance to enjoy our gardening expert Sophie Thomson's own garden. Sophie's garden will be open next weekend as part of the Open Garden scheme, and she will have local nurseries selling interesting and unusual ornamentals, herbs, succulents and vegies. There will also be a number of guest speakers on topics ranging from urban beekeeping to backyard chooks and ducks.

Where and when: Saturday, November 7, Sunday, November 8 and Monday, November 9 from 10am to 4.30pm at 394 Springs Rd, Mt Barker Springs (follow the signs from Mt Barker)

Cost: $10 for adults, children under 18 free. For more information and the full program of garden speakers visit sophiespatch.com.au/open-garden/

WATERING

Most successful growers water daily in hot weather, and two to three times each week in spring and autumn.

An automatic watering system is a great investment. Liquid fertilise each week with fertiliser at half the maker's recommendation. Slow-release fertiliser works well if you cannot manage regular fertilising.

Modern, recently produced cymbidiums are generally better, more productive and easier to grow than many older varieties.

Consider purchasing some new varieties and culling any which fail to flower regularly.

CHECK THE SHADE

Check how much light your plants are receiving. If they are too shaded, the plants may grow well but be reluctant to flower.

Growing under clear panel roofing can sometimes get too hot and dry. Clear panel roofing can also get dirty or cloudy, resulting in excessive shading. Fifty per cent shading during summer is ideal, coupled with a good watering program.

Putting them into full sun is good in winter, however, be careful to protect them if hail is likely. If they were put into full sunlight now, they would most likely be sunburnt on bright days.

There are a number of orchid clubs which can give good advice and welcome visitors and newcomers.

Or you can contact the Cymbidium Club of South Australia via the website cymchidssa.com.au

Kevin Hipkins Seedlings Update (Photo's On Previous Page)

Most members would have been impressed with the root systems on the seedlings from Royale Orchids, which were distributed last meeting.

The information below is from Kevin Hipkins, explaining how he goes about deflasking his plants, and getting great root systems.

Kevin begins by removing the plants from the flask, removing the agar growing medium (washing them), then grading them, and very importantly, discarding the small, poor growing plants.

He wraps the roots in sphagnum moss, and carefully inserts them into growing trays. Kevin believes that only the best quality sphagnum should be used. He uses Besgro Sphagnum, which comes from New Zealand, and is available from Garden City Plastics. It comes in various sized blocks and is dehydrated when purchased. Kevin uses the 240 litre block, which costs about $120, but is good to accommodate a very large number of plants. It is carefully hydrated, over several days, making sure that it is not saturated before using.

Kevin just wraps the roots of the plant in sphagnum, and pushes it into individual cells of the growing tray. He makes sure that there is enough sphagnum to be very firm in the cell. He then waters the tray with worm juice, diluted 10 to 1. No fertilizer is used initially. After a few weeks he begins fertilizing with a good quality chemical fertilizer, at no more than half the manufacturer's recommended rate. Be careful if applying organic fertilizers. It can make the sphagnum rotten and mushy, and not good for the root system.

The plants can grow quickly, and need potting on quickly. It is best to remove most of the sphagnum, before potting into a bark/coir based growing mix. After potting on, organic based fertilizers work well, but still use at half the manufacturer's recommended application rates.
